

REPUBLIC OF TURKEY
ALLIANCE OF CIVILIZATIONS
NATIONAL STRATEGY

I. INTRODUCTION

Turkey, being conscious of its cultural heritage of peaceful coexistence and being an insider to the cultures, traditions and institutions of the West for nearly two centuries, is in a unique position to understand the significance of dialogue among civilizations and to apprehend the dire consequences that may result from the absence of tolerance and understanding among cultures. This is why the Alliance of Civilizations, initiated by the Turkish Prime Minister, Mr. Recep Tayyip Erdoğan, and Spanish Prime Minister, Mr. José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero, and launched by the U.N. Secretary-General, Mr. Kofi Annan, as a UN project in 2005, has been adopted wholeheartedly in Turkey.

The High Level Group of the Alliance of Civilizations, co-chaired by Minister of State, Prof. Dr. Mehmet Aydın, and by the former General Director of UNESCO, Mr. Federico Mayor, fulfilled the mandate given to them and issued a Report in Istanbul in November 2006. The Report, with its keen analyses, rich content and concrete recommendations is considered a landmark document, particularly with respect to its emphasis on an action-driven approach to prevent conflicts, reduce tension, and increase dialogue and cooperation among civilizations. The Alliance is rightfully regarded as the peace project of the 21st century.

The U.N. Secretary-General Mr. Ban Ki-moon's commitment to the project, his appointment of the former President of Portugal Mr. Jorge Sampaio as the High Representative of the Alliance of Civilizations, and last but not least the increasing support of the Group of Friends, make us highly optimistic about the current success and future potential of our initiative.

The problems that challenge us today are of a complex nature; hence the strategies that we develop must match their complexity. Like in many other situations, the best way to achieve alliance among cultures is through multiple strategies: initiating immediate cooperation when possible, appealing to the strength of arguments when needed, and providing various incentives to make cooperation preferable when appropriate. Complex and multifaceted though it is, our strategy is a strategy of action, not of mere thought or talks. We consider inertia or indifference towards problems that are undermining peaceful relations among nations as the worst possible approach. Thus the initial engagement with these problems begins with a proper cognitive and emotive reaction. However, the current situation of the world requires from us to do more and to join our efforts in unison for the common good as it was indicated frequently and amply in the HLG Report of the Alliance of Civilizations. An example of good practice at the international level was provided in 2006 in a joint effort by the Turkish and Spanish Prime Ministers, who published the article "A Call for Respect and Calm" in handling the cartoon crisis. To increase the number of these kinds of cooperative efforts is one of the main objectives of Turkey's National Strategy.

The successful completion of Turkey's full accession into the European Union, which has been underway since 1963, will be a good example of the Alliance of Civilizations and of the coexistence of communities and individuals from different religions and cultures in a milieu of peace and tolerance.

In order to realize the objectives of the Alliance of Civilizations, peace and cooperation among individuals and nations should first be seen as a public good for the benefit of all. Wars and conflicts are not, and should not, be seen as necessary steps of human progress; their decline in number, scope and effect will only give way to our hopes for a peaceful future for humanity. Peace and cooperation must be perceived as the normative ground upon which human relations develop and human potential flourishes. This change of perception requires a major restructuring of our thoughts and beliefs towards relations among individuals, societies, institutions, nations and cultures. In sum, what is needed is a passionate heart, a firm resolution, a new mindset. To provide for all three together in a coherent way, our national strategy aims to realize projects and activities toward the values and goals of the Alliance of Civilizations. The key concepts that guide our strategy and motivate our actions are pluralism and diversity, friendship and cooperation, dialogue and understanding, and respect for human dignity and gender equality.

Pluralism and Diversity: Although diversity can create difficulties, it can also be a rich resource for solutions to the problems that we are facing today. Many consider diversity to be the real engine behind social progress. A lack of diversity can even be seen as the cause of stagnation that affects many societies. Diversity and pluralism require cognitive skills that promote different ways of perceiving and interpreting problems and generating a wide range of solutions for them. Diverse groups and societies outperform homogeneous ones. People with different cultural backgrounds are more likely to see the world differently and to have fresh perspectives on important matters in life. Human progress depends as much on our ability to turn our differences into advantages as it does on our readiness to deal with new problems. A diverse society is also more likely to have talented individuals who lead their communities to safe shores in troubled times. Diversity is beneficent when there is a coherent structure upon which diverse opinions, interests and acts can converge. When individuals are constantly competing against each other, and perpetually trying to undo what others achieve, diversity has little to offer.

Friendship and Cooperation: Cooperation and friendship among cultures proceeds in different dimensions. In some cases, a valid norm is sufficient for cooperation and in others, face-saving concerns might be a strong incentive for individuals or groups to work together. At times, concerns about being left out or being isolated may also motivate cooperation. However, unlike cooperation between two individuals through reciprocal relations, alliance among cultures can require carefully formed incentives and commonly shared values. Cooperation itself does not necessarily carry an objective value, since two individuals or groups may cooperate to the detriment of a third one. The perspective of this potential third party has to be built into the general structure of our strategies. In our strategy, participation for the common good is the rule.

Dialogue and Understanding: There are various well known methods to be applied for problems that arise in the area of intercultural relations, and these methods include negotiation, conflict resolution and mediation. Dialogue is an approach which is related to these methods, but less clearly defined. This can be taken as an advantage since dialogue, being more flexible, can be easily adapted to each specific situation. Furthermore, dialogue requires cooperation at the minimum level without which the participants could not even carry out their interaction. Dialogue and the processes that are conducive to it are therefore the main tools with which we may begin to work on issues that emerge out of our differences in values, beliefs and acts.

There are several criteria that test genuine intercultural communication. Deepening one's knowledge about one's own culture and cultivating an appreciation for other cultures come first. Moreover, without the critical skills necessary for evaluating constantly changing information, dialogue is unlikely to progress very far. Finally, dialogue entails an ethical stance through which our interactions cast off their habitual routine and transform into a significant relation. These criteria do not only make dialogue possible but also constitute the basics without which no long term relation can last.

Respect for Human Dignity and Gender Equality: During various stages of policy making, planning, evaluation and implementation, respect for human dignity and gender equality will form the focal point that defines our activities. Disagreements are the brute facts of life. We often disagree not only in our tastes but even in our perceptions of facts, and more importantly, in our choices of ethical norms. Some norms, however, are too valuable to be a subject for negotiation. Our strategy is based on respect for human dignity, gender equality, freedom, tolerance, and the democratic governance that lets these values function fully in a pluralistic society.

II. STRUCTURE

A. AoC NATIONAL COORDINATION COMMITTEE

In order to realize the National Strategy of the Alliance of Civilizations in its entirety and to secure coordination among the relevant Ministries, institutions and non-governmental organizations, an AoC National Coordination Committee will be established and its director and members will be appointed by the Prime Minister. The National Coordination Committee, which will operate under the guidance of the Minister of State, Prof. Dr. Mehmet Aydın, will organize regular meetings during 2008 – 2009 and prepare an annual report to be presented to the Prime Ministry regarding the developments in the area of Alliance of Civilizations. The projects included in the National Strategy will be implemented by the relevant Ministries. The National Coordination Committee will consist of the representatives from the following Ministries.

Ministry of State (Prof. Dr. Mehmet Aydın)
Ministry of State (Mr. Murat Başesgioğlu)
Ministry of State (Mrs. Nimet Çubukçu)
Ministry of State (Prof. Dr. M. Said Yazıcıoğlu)
Ministry of Interior Affairs
Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Ministry of National Education
Ministry of Labor and Social Security
Ministry of Culture and Tourism
Ministry of Environment and Forestry

B. GRAND NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Since a significant number of the Members of the Grand National Assembly are already involved with various activities and projects that come under the umbrella of inter-cultural dialogue, the National Coordination Committee will work closely with them to coordinate various efforts and maximize their outcome.

C. MUNICIPALITIES AND LOCAL AUTHORITIES

The National Coordination Committee will cooperate with the municipalities and local authorities so that the main objectives of the Alliance are reflected in their social policies, and secure the involvement of individuals and groups at the community level.

D. CIVIL SOCIETY AND BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS

As recommended in the High Level Group Report, the National Coordination Committee will aim to secure the involvement of national and international organizations and civil society groups in the projects and activities of the Alliance of Civilizations. Among these organizations are UNESCO, UNDP, OSCE, OIC, IRCICA, Anna Lind Euro-Mediterranean Foundation, TİKA, TESEV, SETA, TOBB, TUSİAD, and MUSİAD. In implementing the AoC projects concerning the youth, the National Coordination Committee will seek the cooperation of national and international youth organizations such as the Youth for the Alliance of Civilizations Initiative.

E. PROCESSES

The Projects included in the National Strategy will be implemented at three levels: (a) new projects will be initiated, such as organizing meetings, publishing articles and books, and establishing centres for cultural dialogue at the universities; (b) support will be provided for the ongoing projects that are active toward the objectives of the AoC, such as the projects that are listed below and are currently implemented by the Ministries and NGOs; and finally (c) a dialogue perspective will be injected into the existing projects that are likely to adapt some of their aims and content to the general aims of the Alliance. (To prevent repetition, the projects under the responsibility of more than one Ministry are mentioned only once.)
